Publisher's Note...

All the great Aacharyas who have nourished the Indian soil with their religious outpourings deeply embeded in philosophy, were of a strong opinion that principle and personality should go hand - in - hand. Even the greatest Advaitic notion of the unity of Atman and Brahman must be clothed in personal worship of a deity for an ordinary man to understand.

Aachaarya Shankara was the foremost luminary in the Indian religio-philosophical screen, who was not just a brilliant philosopher - commentator (Bhaashyakaara) but also a devotee par-excellence, who established the six-fold path of worship (Shanmata-Sthaapanacharya)

Shankaracharya bequethed to mankind innumerable stotras, which were religious yet soaked in philosophical nectar. Saundaryalahari has earned a very high place amongst his works,not only for its lyrical beauty, but also for the details it gives regarding Mantra-Shaastra, especially Shaakta.

There is a legend regarding the origin of the Saundaryalahari. When Shankara visited Kailaasa, he was gifted with the manuscript of Saundaryalahari and five sphatika lingas. Lord Nandi, unwilling to part with the esoteric verses took back a part of it. Shri Sankara completed the remaining part upon coming back to bhuloka(earth), hence the distinction between the first 41 verses called Aanandalahari which is a treasure-house of information on Srividya and Saundaryalahari starting from verse 42 which is lyrical and extols the beauty and greatness of Mother Tripurasundari.

This text has several commentaries by stalwarts of Srividya such as Bhaskaraaya, Lakshmidhara, Kaivalyaashrama etc.

Giving the text both in Devanagari and Roman script and a lucid translation in English along with the Prayoga for each mantra is an attempt from the GIRI house, who have always strived to bring the tradition closer to the modern generation.

We thank Shri. A. R. Parthasarathy for giving a beautiful running translation of the text.

We also express our indebtness to Dr. P. Ramachandrasekhar, for his editorial work and for providing additional brief notes to certain verses of Aanandalahari, along with the prayoga for each Shloka.

We request the readers to kindly get initiated from a guru before indulging in Japa, because only with a proper `Upadesha` the mantras gain potency. We also caution the readers from indulging in any prayoga other than common welfare of ones family and society at large.

Devi described as Supreme reality in Her union with Shiva

Lord Shiva becomes capable of creating this universe only in association with You (Shakti). Otherwise, it becomes impossible for him to even move in the most minute measure. How can one who has not performed any virtuous deed become qualified to either worship or extol You who is worthy of adoration by Vishnu, Shiva and Brahma ?

Note: In this hymn the emphasis is laid on the feminine or Mother aspect of Devi. This verse also points to the construction of Shri Chakra which is evolved as a union between 4 Shiva triangles and 5 Shakti triangles.

Greatness of the dust of Devi's feet

Brahma collects the extremely fine particles of dust from Your lotus feet, and creates the entire mass of universe. Aadisesha carries somehow on his head the dust of Your feet which is the very constituent of the entire universe. Shiva transforms this universe to dust and applies it as holy ash (Vibhuthi) all over his body.

The dust of Devi's feet confers liberation

The dust of Your feet is like the city of the rising Sun removing the darkness from the minds of those ignorant ones, like the pollen dust from the bunches of flowers of the Kalpaka tree (Wish-yielding tree), conferring the Knowledge of the Self (Atman) on those inert ones who lack discrimination, like the heap of Chintaamani gems (which grant any desired wish) to the poor, and is like the canine teeth of Murari (Vishnu) who in His incarnation as Aadivaraaha while rescuing Goddess Mother Earth from the bottom of the ocean, to those drowned in the ocean of births in this world.

Blessed are the few virtuous persons who propitiate as the wave of the ocean of Knowledge - Absolute Bliss, seated on the lap of Lord Paramashiva on the couch which too is an aspect of Shiva, in the Chintaamani palace, in the midst of thick cluster of Kadambha trees, in the island of gems surrounded by Kalpaka trees in the middle of the ocean of nectar.

Note: This verse speaks esoterically about the Shakti worship done through the Shrichakra. Sudhaa-Sindhu or ocean of nectar is the 'Baindava', the central point of Srichakra . The Chakra with 43 triangles forms the repose or body of Devi. The Brahma, Vishnu, Rudra, Ishaana & Sadaashiva represent the acts of creation, sustenance, destruction, anhiliation and blessing; all these collectively called Panchakrityas overseen by Devi.

You are reveling with Your consort in the thousand-petalled lotus (Sahasraara Padma) which is attained after transcending the channel of Sushumna transiting through the chakras (Control centres) of the body starting with the Moolaadhaara chakra representing the earth element, Manipooraka chakra representing the water element, Swaadhishthaana chakra representing the fire element, Anahatha chakra of the heart representing the air element, Vishuddhi chakra above it representing the space element and finally, Aagjna chakra between the brows representing the mind element.

Note:

The internal adoration of Devi, comprising of awakening and ascent of Kundalini by tantric practices of meditation, passing it through the various Chakras culminating in Sahasraara is given here.

The order of Chakras is slightly changed, Svaadishthaana is positioned after Manipoora; whereas it is otherwise. This reversal is to maintain the evolutionary order in which the Panchabhootas(elements) were created. Kundalinee is the Shakti of Jiva, resting in the sphere near the base bone of spinal chord, called Moolaadhaara. The Spinal column connects this Moolaadhaara with Sahasraara, the area of Shiva in Jiva.

When through proper Yogic practices, the Kundalini is awakened, it passes through the Sushumnaa naadi, penetrating the six Chakras and finally uniting with Shiva in Sahasraara.

Sahasraara also referred to as Chandramandala, Dwaadashaanta, Brahmarandhra etc is the repose of Sadaashiva. When the Kundalini, the aspect of Divine Mother unites there, it gets the name Saada. These details are to be known especially by the Samayaacharins, the internal worshippers. By knowing the uniqueness of the form of each of the Chakra and by engaging in proper meditation as directed by one's own Guru, the devotee becomes qualified to attain the highest aim of life, namely the union with Divine Mother.

Note: When, through the awakening, Kundalini passes through Sushumnaa and reaches the Sahasrara, also called as sphere of Moon, a shower of nectar drenches the whole body and mind of the devotee filling him with delight.

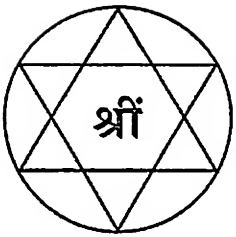
Description of Srichakra

With its nine basic principles of the foundation of the universe, comprising the four Shiva chakras and, distinct from these four, the five Shakti chakras apart from the bindu known as shambhu, Your residence of Srichakra has forty-four triangles consisting of eight petals levels sixteen petals levels, three circles and three lines.



11. This verse speaks about the structure of Srichakra.

Note: Srichakra consists of 9 Basic triangles. Four of them representing Shiva and five representing Shakti. These triangles intersect each other, and are arrayed concentrically.

The five Shakti triangles stand for the panchabhootas, panchatanmaatras, pancahakarmendriyas, panchapraanas and manas.

The four Shiva triangles stand for Maaya, Shuddha-vidyaa, Maheshvara and Sadaashiva. The facing of the apex of Shiva and Shakti triangles differ according to Samaya and Kaula schools of Shaktaa. In the Center is a small triangle with a bindu, which represents the union of Shiva-Shakti; also called Saadaakhyaa Kalaa. These 9 (4+5) triangles are called Moola prakriti, i.e., the Primal Cosmic Source of Energy for the creation of the world.

The nine triangles are representative of body (microcosm) as well as universe(macrocosm). In body the 5 shakti konas stand for skin(trak), blood(asrk), flesh(maamsa), fat(medas) & bones (asthi) and the 4 shivakonas stand for marrow (majja) semen(shukla), life-breath (praana) & Jiva(self).

As universe, the 5 shaktikonas stand for five elements and 4 shiva konas stand for maayaa, suddhavidyaa, Maheshvara and Sadaashiva. Hence at both cosmic & physical level the nine konas of Srichakra is the constituent material (moola prakriti).

When these nine triangles intersect, they form 43 smaller triangles, called kona in 5 sets. First set of 3 (trikona), then a set of 8 (ashtakona) , two sets of 10 (dashara yugma) and lastly a set consisting 14(chaturdashara). These 43 konas along with the central triangle of Shambhu, are the Sharana-Kona, spoken of in the verse.

Oh daughter of the emperor of the snow-clad mountain! Excellent poets and even Gods like Brahma (consort of Saraswathi, the Goddess of Knowledge) try to make somehow highly imaginative efforts to find parallels to Your exquisite beauty (but with no success!). The enchanting divine damsels keen on beholding Your charm through the eye-sight of Lord Shiva, (who only is gifted with the ability to relish the beauty of Shakti), for acquiring that gift though it is hard or even impossible to get, indulge in strenuous penance propitiating Lord Shiva attaining thereby their identification with Lord Shiva on a mental plane.

The Rays from the foundation Chakras and beyond

The pair of lotus feet of Yours transcends the six Chakras and from here proceed the rays numbering fifty-six in the Moolaadhaara Chakra representing the earth element, fifty-two in the Manipooraka representing the water element, sixty-two in the Swaadhishthaana Chakra representing the fire element, fifty-four in the Anaahata Chakra of the heart representing the air element, seventy-two, in the Vishuddhi Chakra above it representing the space element and sixty-four in the Aagjna Chakra between the brows representing the mind element.

Note: The Srichakra is said to represent not only the cosmos(Brahmaanda) but also the human body (Pindaanda). The Sahasraara (1000 petaled lotus chakra) is the bindu-sthaana of Srichakra, from which the life-sustaining bliss of nectar flows. From this place, referred here as the paadaambuja-yugam, the pair of feet, 360 rashmis or rays emerge. These rashmis are the potential power of the Shakti, which drench the Six chakras of the body. According to the tantras, these 360 rashmis manifest as the 72000 naadi (energy channels) controlling the body.

Meditation on the form of the art of love

Oh Empress-consort of Paramashiva! He who meditates upon the face of women in the Bindu – the dot – and down below it the twin breasts and further down below the generating organ which is the half form of Shiva (in the Ardhanaareeswara posture) and contemplates the kamakala in those parts and with ease enraptures the lady. Not only mortal women but the entire three world with Sun and Moon as its breasts would be attached by Him.

Note: This verse esoterically speaks of a very important aspect of Samaya and Kaula worship, namely the Kaamakalaa-dhyaana(meditation on the kaama-bija) The details of this has to be learnt only from one's preceptor.

By meditating on the limbs of the Devi to be in the form of kaamabeeja (kleem), a devotee gets his identity merged with Her.

Has a form like a streak of lightning

Noble people with their minds purified of all taints like avarice and delusions arising from Avidyaa (ignorance) attain boundless Bliss flowing waves after waves, perceiving Your 'kalaa' of 'Saadhaa' which is stabilized in the Sahasraara chakra in the thick foliage of lotuses above the six basic control chakras, shining in the forms of the Sun, Moon and Fire and possessing a very subtle effulgence resembling the streak of lightning.

Note: The region from Moolaadhaara and Svaadhishthaana represents the base sexual rendences and the Brahma-granthi the level of consciousness regarding physical aspects. The next two chakras Manipoora and Anaahata terminate in Vishnu - granthi- the region of Sun light. The two Chakras there namely the Vishuddhi and Aajya end in Rudra-granthi the region of Moon-nectar.

Over and above these six is the transcendant 1000 peteled lotus which holds the Saadaakhya kalaa of Shakti, which is responsible for the creation of the cosmos.

The power and glory of extolling

Oh Bhavani (consort of 'Bhava' meaning 'Shiva')! One who utters the twin syllables of "Bhavani tvam" (Oh Bhavani You!) desiring to extol You in worship expressing the craving "Kindly direct Your merciful sight towards me", is conferred by You merger with Yourself understanding the words to mean 'May I be Your into Your feet which have been lit up with the radiance from the crowns of Vishnu, Brahma and Indra.

Note: In Sanskrit the word Bhavani by itself would mean the "consort of Bhava(Shiva)". It is also a verbal form of imperitive mood, singular in first person - which would mean "May I become" Here though the devotee only addresses the Goddess as "Bhavani! (Oh consort of Bhava!"), Devi in all her love takes 'Bhavani' to mean " May I become" Tvam- 'You' , and immediately confers upon him, the state of union with Herself. This verse highlights the unconditional love which Devi has towards her devotees.

Note: This verse has a reference to the episode of churning of milky ocean which produced Kaalakoota poison, which Shiva drank to save the world from Anihiliation. Aachaarya Shankara says, that Shiva survived the poison was due to the greatness of Devi, who wears Sun and Moon, the symbols of endless Time, as her ear-ornaments, therefore could never be widowed. But, on Your prompting and insistence he sent down to the universe that tantra of Yours – Srividya - which is capable of conferring all the objectives together.

Note: This verse speaks of sixty-four tantras promulgated by Shiva, keeping short-time goals as perspective . These tantras were not entirely directed towards attaining liberation, hence due to the insistence of Devi, Shiva gave out the pure tantra, identified by Bhaaskararaaya with Vaamakeshvara Tantra, which contains the mantra and mode of worship of Tripurasundari.

Srividya, the fifteen –lettered chant

Oh Mother! The mantra consisting of three groups having The beejakshara 'ka' of Shiva, beejakshara 'yey' of Shakti, beejakshara 'ee' of Manmatha,(deity of love), beejakshara 'la' of the Earth, thereafter, beejakshara 'ha' of the Sun, beejakshara 'sa' of the Moon with cool rays, beejakshara 'ka' of Manmatha,(deity of love), beejakshara 'ha' of the Hamsa (Swan) manthra, beejakshara 'la' of Indra, thereafter, beejakshara 'sa' , the supreme seed, beejakshara 'ka 'of Manmatha (deity of love) and beejakshara 'la' of Hari, to all these letters, the Bhuvaneswari beeja of Yours with their reverberating hums are suffixed to each group at their respective positions and this constitute the limbs of Your Mantra .

Note: As a standard procedure, the beejakshara etc; are not directly mentioned, same is followed while speaking of other esoteric aspects. This is to ensure that only after direct initiation from a Guru, these principles should be put into practice.

According to the dictum of mantra Shaastra, the mantra (panchadashee) of Tripurasundari is given here. Lakshmidhara, the commentator adds that another letter 'Srim' should be added, which makes it shodasi, truly making it as 'Sri Vidya. Lakshmidharaa interprets this as Kaadi Vidya. (Kaadi Vidya, Haadi Vidya, Saadi vidya- are the three streams of mantra traditions in Srividya)

The greatness of panchadashi is that the mantra, consisting three segments (koota) is equated with chanting Gayatri 4 times. Each segment confess the benifit of chanting the Gayatri once, and unity of segments confers the benefit of Gayatri japa performed once.

There is no mantra in the world which can equal Panchadashi's greatness, for it is assured in the tantra's that only in one's last birth can one have the fortune of being initiated into Panchadashi Mantra.

Note: The word 'mahabhogarasikas,' according to Lakshmidhaara indicates Samayachaarins, the inner worshippers. The three syllables added makes it as sixteen syllabled sodasi (asta-dashaakshari according to Lakshmidhaara)

Through meditative process, mantra is repeated and a triangle is established in Anaahata(heart chakra). Devi is brought from Bavindava sthaana to Anaahata and the fire of Anaahata is lit there and called Shivagni, countless oblations of ghee from Kaamadhenu is offered in shivaagni. The devotee wears rosary of Chintaamani the wish-yielding jem.

The significance of this internal worship is that apart from spiritual discipline, wordly prosperities can also be attained.

The term "chintaamani guna nibaddhaakshavalayaa:" indicates the methadology of Japa using Akshamaala. The central bead of the rosary (Akshamaala) is called Meru. The japa of a Mantra should be only till one reaches the Meru. It is indicated by the letter 'Ksha'.

Kaala: time, Kula : Colours, Naama:conventional names, Jnyaana:differentiate and undifferentiated knowledge, Chitta:mind, senses, intellect etc, Naada: Sound in its four-fold aspect of paraa (Supreme & primordial); pashyantee (the sound which manifested as mantra, hence seen) madhyamaa (the sound audible to the Yogis in meditation) and vaikhari (speech of men), Bindu: the six Chakras beginning with moolaadhaara, Kalaa: mantra – the Maatrakaaksgaras (52 alphabets) and Jiva: the individual self within each body.

The shloka emphasises the essential unity between Shiva and Shakti, accepting their role as complementing each other.

The unity of power and the possessor of power (Shakti and Shakta) is spoken of here by Aachaaryal Shankara to put to rest, any theory that treats Shiva or Shakti as superior among the two.

Meditation on Parvati and Parameshwara in the Visuddhi Chakra

I bow down before Shiva who has a clear crystalline form and is the creator of space, in Your Visuddhi Chakra, and You Yourself who is of identical resolves with his (Shiva's) in all cases. I salute You both from whom emanate the rays like those of the Moon by which the darkness of ignorance of the world gets removed and it shines like the chakora bird reveling under the Moon.

Note: In Vishuddhi Chakra, the ignorance is removed and there is upsurge of light of consciousness. The divine couple in this chakra are called Vyomeshvara & Vyomeshvari,

Freedom from all obstacles caused due to black-magic etc. and developing physical health.	Gold-foil, sloka to be written on water to be consumed after Japa	5000 (times)	45 (days)	Payasam, Fruit, Coconut, Urud dal vada.

The merger of the jiva and Brahman in Anahatha chakra

I salute the pair of Swans who delight swimming in the lakes of the minds of great people and who are connoisseurs of the honey of the bliss of the fully blossomed lotus of knowledge . From their pleasant dialogues evolve the different types of sciences, reckoned as eighteen in number. They filter out the faults from merits like milk being extracted from water.

Note: In the Anaahata Chakra, the Saadhaka attains expertise in the eighteen-fold scriptural knowledge – 4 vedas. 6 vedangas namely Siksha, Kalpa, Vyakaraa, Niruikta, Jyotisha, Chandas, Mimaamsa, Nyaaya, Puraana, Dharmashaastra, 4 Upavedas- Ayurveda, Dhanur veda Gaandharva veda and Arthashaastra. The divine couple here are Hamseshvara and Hamseshvari.

Goddess as Kameswari in Swadhishtana

Oh Mother! Meditating on the element of fire in Your Swaadhishthana, I adore that Rudra who dazzles incessantly as the fire of deluge, and Yourself also, in the form of that mightily powerful Samaya (potent Maha Shakti.) When that fiery vision of Rudra grows large due to fury and burns down the worlds, it is the vision of Yours, streaming with mercy that extends the comfort of coolness.

Note: The Svaadhishthaana chakra is described. The Deity here is Samvarteshvara or Kaalaagni Rudra who with his flames destroys the universe. The merciful glance of Mother Samayaamba restores the universe afresh.

Goddess is like a streak of lightning amidst the clouds in the Manipuraka charka

I worship Your manifestation of an ever auspicious nature which is like the wonderful cloud which by its showers cools the three worlds burnt down by Rudra like the Sun's heat at deluge, which has as its only resort Your Manipuraka chakra, which is accompanied by the streak of lightning, the supreme power dazzling as the enemy of darkness, which is like the rainbow made by reflection (of hue from Manipoora) and which is darkish grey in hue.

Note: The region below the Manipoora are dark, hence just like the lightning illuminating dark night, the grace of Maheshwara would illumine the inner sphere of the Saadhaka along with nectar like shower of Saudaminiamba.

The dance of delight at the Mooladhara chakra

I worship Ananda Bhairava who is performing the excellent dance (Mahataandava) depicting the nine sentiments together with You assuming the name of Samayaa keen on intent of dancing (lasya) in Your Moolaadhaara chakra. For the regeneration of the world which was destroyed in the great deluge, this universe has a father and a mother in both of You who are ever merciful.

Note: In Moolaadhaara, the Lord Aadinaatha and Amba Laasyeshvari perform the dance of destruction so as to allow the world to evolve to enable Jiva to experience his karmas and prepare for moksha. At the end of this Taandava of Aadinaatha and laasya of Laasyeshvari the universe evolves again.

Note : Vishaala, Kalyaani, Ayodhya, Dhaaraa, Madthura, Abhangavati, Avanti and Vijaya are names of the cities of ancient India. Aachaarya Shankara uses pun to make the names of the city as attributes to the eyes of Devi.

We salute with respect both of Your feet, pleasant to look at, shining brightly and decorated with the wet paste of lac. Pasupathi (Lord Shiva) is jealous of the Asoka trees in the Nandavana garden which is his rival for receiving kicks from Your feet.

Paramashiva saluting Parvathi in pangs of separation is a victory for Manmatha

When Paramashiva playfully addressed You in advertently by another women's name and became puzzled as to how to mitigate Your anger born of love and prostrated before You, Your feet touched his forehead, Manmatha was waiting to settle his score of enmity with him for a long time for being burnt by the fiery eye of Shiva and a jingle of victory was raised by him during this episode.

Softness of fore-part of Mother's Foot

Oh Goddess! The upper portion of Your feet is the repository of Your glory and a protector of Your followers. When they are soft, out of mercy to protect Your followers from calamities, how is it that good poets have compared them with the hard shell of the tortoise? How were those feet lifted by the kind-hearted Paramashiva with his hands at the time of marriage and placed on the hard grinding stone?

Note: Aacharya Shankara referes to the common poetic comparison of a well formed upper portion of foot with the shell of tortoise

The Goddess is the very form of the merciful nature of Shiva

The mercy of Paramashiva which is beyond the comprehension of the mind and speech victoriously shines in the form of supreme goddess Arunaa (Tripurasundari) for protection of the world. That embodiment of mercy shines with the curls of the hair-locks with natural sweetness in her smile, flowery softness in the mind, hard as the ruby gem in the breasts, very slim at the waist and voluptuous in the breasts and hips.

Image of the Moon as a cosmetic for utilization of the Goddess

The image of the Moon in the sky is a water-filled emerald case. It is filled with the incense of camphor in the form of rays. Musk is the spot on the Moon. Therefore, I think that Brahma unfailingly fills up everyday that jewel box which gets emptied daily by Your utilizing its contents.

Impossibility of access to the Goddess by persons not controlling their sense objects

You are shining as the empress of the inner chamber of Lord Shiva who burnt down the three worlds. Therefore, it is impossible for those who do not have control over their senses and mind to approach Your feet for worship. Hence, even Gods like Indra with their penances have been able to attain only siddhis like Anima etc., which actually serve as Your door-keepers.

Note: Only true devotees can have the maturity to worship Devi in Her true manifestation in Sahasraara. Demi-gods like Indra, considered powerful in the world, have only access to psychic powers like Anima etc who are at the sevice of Devi. Hence they are far inferior to Devi's real devotees.

The glory of the chastity of the Goddess

Oh chastity personified ! Don't many poets seek the resort of the consort of Brahma (Saraswati) and secure it? Did not someone become entitled to the title of Lakshmipati (lord of Lakshmi) by possessing some type of wealth? Oh the greatest among the chaste women! Even the Kuravaka tree will not get the chance to come into contact with Your breasts which can be enjoyed only by Shiva.

Note: According to poetic belief, the Kuravaka tree is supposed to be craving for embrace of damsels, after which only it will start flowering.

Unique all - inclusiveness of Tripurasundari

Oh the consort of Supreme Brahman! Scholars of Vedas and scriptures designate You as Saraswathi, consort of Brahma. They also avert that You only are Vishnu's consort and Shiva's consort Parvati. Transcending all these, You are the fourth and source of all the three and as Mahaamaaya, possessing the unattainable and limitless power, make the entire universe function.

The sacred water of Devi's feet will make even a dumb one speak

Oh Mother! When can I, seeking the knowledge of Supreme Brahman, drink the sacred red-tinged water washing Your lac decorated feet which is capable of confering poetic genius even to a naturally dumb person. One who worships the goddess will have abundance of knowledge, wealth, beauty and long life

One who worships You achieves a pleasure endowed with knowledge (saraswati) and wealth (Lakshmi) making even Brahma and Vishnu envious of him. He weakens the chastity of Rathi, consort of Manmatha by his exquisite beauty. He enjoys the ultimate Bliss, freed from his animal instincts and bondage of previous actions in this long embodied state.

Futility of words in extolling Devi's greatness

Oh Source of learning! This composition comprising words in praise of You, extolling You using the talent conferred by Yourself is like offering Tarpana (watery tribute) to the ocean with its own water, making an offering of water from the water drops of the Moonstone itself to the Moon who showers nectarine rays and worshipping the Sun with camphor lit by his own fire!
